And in the middle of all that... well, I can really only speak for myself, but I tend to forget myself in all of it.

Healings by Elizabeth

In a major pro bono effort covered by The New York Times, The Atlantic and ProPublica, Elizabeth represents thousands of female sexual assault survivors in a federal class action against the Austin Police Department and the Travis County District Attorney's Office over alleged failures in the investigation and prosecution of sexual assaults. Applying creative strategies and her 15 years of jury trial experience, she has helped clients defend against class actions in jurisdictions across the country, respond to workplace injuries and fatalities, successfully defend against shareholder actions, and resolve complex business disputes. The end result is breathtaking.

Elizabeth A. Myers

Elizabeth Myers is currently working at to provide care. Beth Myers is the Director of Special Collections, a position held since 2014. We had music going and we were chatting away like we had known each other for years.
