Daniel Pelavin: Ace of Diamonds

An early interest in serigraphy cemented a love of rich, flat colors, while a reverence for themes of transportation and industry has filled his compositions with trains, planes, automobiles and dynamic cityscapes. Perpetually curious about everything design, we report on, curate and celebrate visual culture, the makers of that culture and the expression of graphic design in all its forms and mediums.

Daniel Pelavin Art Prints

Note that the selected images are of his more typographic work, although you can see the entire breadth of his creativity on his. He does a lot of work with robotics and past-future wars. From his earliest work, produced with templates, french curves and drafting tools, to a present day virtuosity in digital media, Pelavin has used a restrained and simplified vocabulary of geometric forms, rich, flat colors and typography inspired by a wide range of 20th century ephemera.

Daniel Pelavin: Ace of Diamonds

My favorite piece of his work has to be the made in the USA logo. He is an instructor of illustration, design and lettering, an author of articles on design practice and education, and has presented his work to design organizations and universities throughout the United States.

After Hours by Daniel Pelavin

For type designers, I would give props to Jim Parkinson, John Downer, Tobias Frere-Jones and, lesser known but equally delightful, Charles Nix and James Montalbano.

Daniel Pelavin: Ace of Diamonds

He has received accolades for illustration and typographic design and a singular ability to seamlessly combine the two. Yet that is only one part of his more complex, knowledgeable and appealing persona. Looking through his works, you can tell he is a great artist.
