National Textbook Corp. - The School Uniform Debate: Pros and Cons of School Uniforms

1. Tell an interesting and engaging story that concerns the topic of your debate.
Topic	Story
The benefits of social media	When I was twelve, my parents divorced. There was no one to turn to for advice or support—except for Jerry. Over the years, Jerry and I spoke about every day. I couldn't see through the fog of emotion, and I kept asking Jerry to help me. Today, Jerry and I consider ourselves to be closer than ever. The only thing is, we never met each other in person.
If anyone should be required to learn a foreign language	No one was teaching German in my high school, and I was interested in learning it. I asked my parents, but no one there understood English. Eventually, I did find a teacher who spoke German, but his teaching was so hard to understand. The problem was that I had no way to learn it. I was so interested in learning it, but I had no way to learn it.
2. Ask a rhetorical question to persuade your audience to side with your position.
Topic	Rhetorical question
Masses are better than PCs	Why all need to get the most out of our computers, right?
Parents should be allowed to physically discipline their children	Is it really wrong for a mother to need to provide her child with the best she possible?
3. Provide an impressive statistic that is directly related to your argument.
Topic	Impressive statistic
Homework should be banned	"According to research from the University of Michigan, 90 percent of high school students consider homework to be the greatest source of stress in their lives."
Coal energy should replace traditional energy	"Did you know that by the year 2050, the world will completely run on coal energy?"
4. Use a well-known or powerful quote to lend credence to your argument.

The study compares the quality of secondary school students' argumentation during structured and unstructured chat interaction.

4 Fast Debate Formats for the Secondary Classroom

The interesting dimension of her work is that she uses a dialectical approach argument with emotion, argument vs emotion to suggest that a solution to the problem of the lack of emotion in models of argument is really to be found one level up, in conceptions of the relationship between rationality and feeling. How to Create a Debate Program, Alfred Snider, I.

Edutopia

To prep students for their first debate, , show students how debaters organize their arguments, watch videos of actual debates, and go over the scoring rubrics for each form of debate.
