Profiles of children's physical activity and sedentary behaviour between age 6 and 9: a latent profile and transition analysis

One use is as a tool for inservicing educators about gifted and talented children and youth in general and about the differentiated social and emotional needs of the specified types in particular. The application of the approach will provide deeper and greater understanding of our gifted and talented. Classes are ordered roughly from most active to least active.

The 6 Different Types of Gifted Students

Based on the perceptions of teachers, children exposed to neglect showed more externalized and internalized problems as well as symptoms on DSM-IV Scales.

Meet The Children

Conclusions: This paper is the first to apply latent profile analysis to the physical activity of UK children as they move through primary school.

Classifying sensory profiles of children in the general population

Conclusions: Current cohorts of children with CHD undergoing CPB show favorable outcomes but remain at risk for long-term neurodevelopmental impairments, particularly those with a genetic disorder and a complicated postoperative course.
