Givat Ram Campus/Israeli National Library Reviewed

I looked at the Garden Cafe, but I didn't want the pasta: Dinner at the Grand Café again though inside because of the heat. On the way back, I noticed a bar had a big screen tv set up for the Denmark-Portugal game, so I bought a beer and watched the last 30 minutes. First, because being able to write in and amongst the ideas I am considering will be useful, but secondly and more importantly: I want to avoid going back and would much prefer to keep my ability to do homework in my own room.

The Ardon Windows [IN HEBREW] by Mordecai, Ardon

Every person from all age groups can find something of interest, whether seeking personal, individual material or in search of creating new fields of knowledge. The National Library has been improved.

Ardon Windows

The Library, one of the oldest and most important national institutions, is curator of the national memory of the Jewish people and the State of Israel, alongside a rich Islamic Library and valuable treasures of spiritual knowledge from around the world and the Middle East region. The two main reading rooms, the Judaica Reading Room and the Islam and Middle East Reading Room, as well as the General Reading Room, have high ceilings and a gallery that circles the entire room.

National Library of Israel

The ground floor of the Library, enclosed in glass walls, covers only part of the area under the columns, similar to the ground floor at Poissy. In the National Library, which has been active for over 120 years, about 5 million items are stored and catalogued, including books from all periods, ancient manuscripts, a unique collection of antique maps, periodicals, posters, photographs, rare collections and a very large and important collection of Jewish and Israeli music. Suffice to say that they kicked me out at 6:45 their somewhat random closing time , although I was still in the middle of making copies.
