ERIC

In other words, the funds from the contributing programs in the school lose their individual identities and the school has one flexible pool of funds. Drawing on the expertise of the American Institutes for Research AIR, each reform model is described and evaluated along a number of dimensions, and rated by their effectiveness in raising student achievement. It is about how to choose a research-based model and how to develop a common vision of change with the power to sustain the school community through the hard work of school reform.
