The Global HIV/AIDS Pandemic, Structural Inequalities, and the Politics of International Health

With Annan's active backing, the creation of this special fund received widespread international support in June 2001, when representatives from more than 50 countries, multilateral agencies, and nongovernmental organizations met at the Special Session of the United Nations General Assembly. Although the United Nations leadership has stood firm in emphasizing the continued importance of the Global Fund and the high priority that must be given to struggles against infectious diseases, issues such as terrorism and bioterrorism have understandably taken precedence in many of the most recent debates about human well-being and safety within the broader context of international relations.
