New ministers included state attorney as interior minister, retired career diplomat as foreign minister, and economist as minister delegate to the prime minister in charge of administrative and economic reform. Government agrees to resign and engages in dialogue discussing the country's new transition. Tourism also recovered after the end of combat operations in Iraq.

Tunisia: 'Six Private Laboratories Have Started to Perform Rt

Towards this end, the Government of Tunisia is working with the OECD to operationalise the country's new PPP law, voted in November 2015, designed to promote transparency, efficiency and effectiveness of public spending, and to help the government of Tunisia meet its public policy objectives. Students are required to score above 50 percent at the end of sixth grade to progress to the lower secondary level. In Tunisia in 2005 —2006, there were 178 public institutions of higher education among which there were 13 universities, 24 higher institutes of technological studies and six higher institutes of teachers' training.

What Type Of Government Does Tunisia Have?

There were also calls by the opposition to delay the elections, holding them in six or seven months with international supervision. The elections were further postponed and ultimately held on 23 October 2011. The MED proposes restructuring, reform and privatisation programmes for these enterprises and establishments, where appropriate.
