Pope picks new cardinals, putting his stamp on Church's future

Both Spain and France could diſpoſe of ſomewhat larger reſources abſolutely, although not relatively, than the Seven Provinces, while at leaſt trebling them in population. The Republic was ſo integral a part of that ſystem which divided Europe into two great hoſtile camps according to creeds rather than frontiers that the hiſtory of its foremoſt citizen touches at every point the general hiſtory of Chriſtendom. The haughty, defiant, auſtere grandee, brave ſoldier, ſagacious ſtateſman, thrifty financier, againſt whom the poiſoned arrows of religious hatred, envious ambition, and petty court intrigue were daily directed, who watched grimly over the exchequer confiſed to him, which was daily growing fuller in deſpite of the cormorants who trembled at his frown; hard worker, good hater, conſcientious politician, who filled his own coſſers without diſhoneſty, and thoſe of the ſtate without tyranny; unſociable, arrogant; pious, very avaricious, and inordinately vain, Maximilian de Bethune, Duke of Sully, loved and reſpected Henry as no man or woman loved and reſpected him.

Darkness of the Dark Ages

The task and the distinction of writing such a work fell to the lot of a Chicago lawyer of Scotch-Irish ancestry, Robert H. John Nepomucen patron saint of Bohemia in 1729. No tithes or first-fruits paid for the maintenance of ministers of religion during this century.

Pope picks new cardinals, putting his stamp on Church's future

Had that country of which he was so long the first citizen maintained until our own day the same proportionate position among the empires of Christendom as it held in the seventeenth century, the name of John of Barneveld would have perhaps been as familiar to all men as it is at this moment to nearly every inhabitant of the Netherlands. The mean temperature on the plateau of Spain is as 15° Réaumur, while that of the coast is as 18° and 19°, in addition to the protection from cutting winds which their mountainous backgrounds afford; nor is the traveller less deceived as regards the heights of the interior mountains than he is with the champaigns, or table-land plains.
