Archaeologists conducting test excavations at a site near Deming, New Mexico.

Archaeology and Society; Reconstructing the Prehistoric Past by Grahame Clark

This comprises most of our human past. This is because most cultures in the Old World had written languages.

Archaeology and society : reconstructing the prehistoric past : Clark, Grahame, 1907

Our aim was not to define the significance or function of these sites in the past, but rather interpreting their importance from the perspective of their contemporary functioning and how they are utilised by various stakeholders today archaeologists, local governments, neopagans, New Agers, tourists etc. There are several different kinds of archaeology: prehistoric, historic, classical, and underwater, to name a few.
