With the possible exception of Canada, if your country is not included in the IRS list of US estate tax treaties, the answer is clearly no.

US taxes: contentious in United States

Does your country have an income tax treaty with the US? Among its recent highlights, the team has been involved in multibillion-dollar litigation against the IRS on behalf of Coca-Cola and Western Digital. Although undoubtedly it will be the case that awards sometimes will be made in respect of achievements directly related to a winner's vocation, business, etc.

Avoiding the US PFIC tax trap Warning: This is a major US tax trap, and one that you should try your utmost to avoid. If you hold US domiciled funds or ETFs, you will overpay US taxes on dividends, and you also potentially risk a huge loss to US estate taxes if you have the poor judgement to die while holding them. And for investors who have or plan an international lifestyle, moving into or out of the US can create large and damaging discontinuities in tax treatment.
