SMALL CITY TRANSIT: MERRILL, WISCONSIN, POINT DEVIATION SERVICE IN A RURAL COMMUNITY

The nickel-plated ornaments, the finely spun fabrics, the beautifully colored prints, the swiftly flying street car, the glowing splendor of the modern night lit with thousands of incandescent lamps, the astonishing cheapening of all articles that once were so costly that only a king could buy them—all these make chapters of marvelous charm, more certain of any reader's attention than the most fascinating novel ever written.
