Anthropometric and descriptive observations on some South Australian Aborigines : with a summary of...

In a letter to commercial lobster fishermen this month, Mr Smith asked for advice about specific actions the industry was proposing to reduce the risk of whale entanglements by October 11. The population in this district has probably always been sparse, and the material of which the implements are made must have been obtained from rocks many miles distant. He had personal acquaintance in 1841 with the tribes which occupied the southern frontage of the Murray, from Echuca to Cobram, and up the course of its southern confluent the Campaspe, Goulburn, and Broken River for some distance.

The last, as agent to Mr.

We may now turn to the coast tribes from the Great Australian Bight, along the south, south-east, and part of the east coast of Australia.

I started somewhat reluctantly, thinking that I was giving up a couple of days' rest at the mission station on what would probably prove, owing to the perversity of the weather, to be a wild-goose chase ; however, I kept to my purpose. On such elevated plateaux were located certain tribes, such as the Ya-itma-thang, the Wolgal, and the Ngarigo. .
