Christian Vandalism

Efforts at resolution further complicated the issue when a third compromise pope was elected in 1409. In asserting other claims as pertaining to his See, he was particularly successful.

Benedictine

Caesarius was an adult at the critical time, 1209, and would have had personal contact with Crusaders and especially with fellow who had taken part in the. He suggests impure thoughts, but the saint repels them by prayer; he incites to passion, but the hero resists the fiend with fastings and faith.

The Benedictines in the Middle Ages

Bernard Mac Camell, Archdeacon of Clogher, was promoted to this See by Pope Innocent VI. For despite this evidence, people persist in believing that the contemplative Orders are the final refuge of idleness, weakness and selfishness, and they remain blind to the miracle of this static apostolate.
