If a convenient recent summary is available, we shall be content to leave that as the main avenue available for future research.

Relationship of Avalonian and Cadomian terranes to Grenville and Pan

On the Ottawa Islands in northern Hudson Bay, it stood at only 150 m and declined to 110 m in western Hudson Strait.

It has spear-headed adaptations to the expanding Appalachian Trail system, worked on vignettes displaying from a dog's point of view the geology of Arisaig and York Redoubt, and is now undertaking a major survey and potential organization of geological collections in the region, a website renewal, contributing to books on the geology of Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, and embarking on its sixth GAC-MAC meeting with input from CSPG. We therefore invoke migration of the ice divide during episodes of shrinkage and regrowth earlier in Late or in Middle Wisconsinan time or entrainment of erratics during the main Early Wisconsinan buildup when Labrador Ice filled southern Hudson Basin and advanced into Ontario; see PREST and NIELSEN, 1987 before establishment of a divide over Hudson Bay DYKE et al.

Some moraines of regional extent - the Québec North Shore Moraine, the Cockburn Moraines, and the Chantrey Moraine System - cannot be thus explained and may represent climatic control.

Late Wisconsinan and Holocene History of the Laur...

With the ever-increasing interest of geologists, geophysicists, geochem- ists, physical geographers, and economists on global problems, it seemed appropriate that the next volumes should be devoted to world re- gional geology. They are the Uni- A USTRALIA -NEW SOUTH WALES versities of Sydney, New South Wales, and Mac- quarie University all situated in Sydney ; University of New England Armidale ; Universi- ties of Newcastle and Wollongong; and the Aus- tralian National University Canberra, A. This distance is well within the dispersal range of P.

Relationship of Avalonian and Cadomian terranes to Grenville and Pan

This older tract, the Lachlan Geo- syncline, extends northward from Victoria through New South Wales, disappearing under the Great Artesian Basin to the north, its his- tory has been extremely complex and the study of the stratigraphy shows that four main oro- genic movements have contributed to the pro- gressive stabilization of the area, commencing in the early Paleozoic and continuing until the Carboniferous. In one of its subdivisions, termed the Lachlan Geosyn- cline, acid and intermediate volcanism were fol- lowed by extensive shelf-limestone deposition, with rich invertebrate faunas.
