Paul's Epistle to the Galatians, revised ed. Most significantly, the burning of the vine in Ezekiel is disciplinary judgment upon the nation, not eternal forfeiture of God's promises, for God never renounces His promises to Israel. When the text says we were once foolish, etc.

The Quest of the Historical Jesus by Albert Schweitzer

But first, we will begin with some cultural background; then explore the other principal text on this theme, 1 Corinthians 6:9; and then return to Romans 1. It has been truly said a beast is not a moral creature, but a man degraded to the level of a beast becomes immoral: his affections become corrupted and perverted from their natural course into that which is contrary to nature. For it is not true that natural men, whether Pagans, or under a profanation of Christianity, regard themselves as bound by no obligations to righteousness.

Romans 11:33

Furthermore, in the section of the epistle where Paul argues for faith as the only requirement for justification 3:21-5:21, obedience is never mentioned to qualify faith. He is resolved to dispense His bounty to whomsoever He pleases.

Romans 9:13

Arius and his followers, for their denial of the true deity of Christ, were deposed and excommunicated by a council of a hundred Egyptian and Libyan bishops at Alexandria in 321.

To explain these imprecators forms of speech some say that they are not expressive of the feelings of the writers as private persons, but that they are inspired by the Holy Spirit to say these things in the name of God, or of Christ.

Gracelife

It is the bulwark of the evangelical doctrines of sin and grace against the obscuration of the gospel, whether by judaizing bigotry or paganizing licentiousness. He will not impute sin. The third missionary tour is so far an enlargement of the second, as that Paul at this time makes Ephesus, in Asia Minor, his great object, which city he had been compelled to pass by in his journey, and which he could only touch at on his return.

The Epistle to the Romans

Hurst is responsible for the translation which was an unusually difficult task , and for the valuable Homiletical selections from the best English sources. Who Gave the Bible to the People? This explanation of conforms to the reason that Paul, in the New Testament, gives to Timothy for prayers for civil rulers: I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; For kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty The purpose of these prayers for the welfare of civil authorities is that purpose clause the church may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. What Jesus learned in the way of perfect devotedness to the Father's will, we have too often to learn in the way of chastisement, because of the waywardness of our path.
