Preventing Child Abuse and Neglect in School

Stress reduces your capacity to think creatively, be patient, problem solve, and try new skills — all strategies that are necessary when working with school-age children. Children in single-parent families may be at risk of neglect due to a lower income and fewer available resources.

Prevention and Treatment of Child Maltreatment

Practice guide 1: Cumulative harm. Child Maltreatment, 53, 261-272. Occasional aggravating or infuriating stories about the bad behavior of school teachers and other school personnel and parents toward children are not a good basis for making law and regulations.

New and Revised Child Abuse and Neglect User Manuals

Research shows that this education leads to improved knowledge about self-protection. If you play an instrument, play for the children. A child is a person under 18 years of age for whom a parent, guardian, foster parent, caretaker, employee of a residential facility or any staff person providing out-of-home care is legally responsible.

Child Maltreatment (Abuse) Prevention, Children Ages Birth to 19 Years

There is a computer, phone, and private space if families need to reach out for help. The child may be given contrast liquid to help injuries show up better.
