Local Government

The main form of taxation at the local level is through property or real estate taxes. Larger cities tend towards a ward- or constituency-based electoral system, in which the city is divided into separate districts, and where each district elects their own councilors.

Government

Party leaders will tour the country, making high-profile photo op visits in electorally important cities and towns, and most news coverage will focus on what they say and do.

Municipal Government in Canada

The particular classification of a municipality is usually based on its population size.

Local Governments

Laws are formed by the passage of bills through Parliament, which are either sponsored by the government or individual members of Parliament.
