There is nothing to bound and limit, but he existing necessarily, when all things else do exist contingently, and by dependance upon his will and pleasure, it could not be but that he must engross all being, all life, and all perfection in himself, because there was nothing else existing besides or before that which did exist necessarily, that is himself, by which what was In him could not be any way limited.

Frankenstein

The Creature's portrait parodies idealized beauty: His limbs were in proportion, and I had selected his features as beautiful. Both the creature and Connie integrate the traditional dualism of head and heart.

Rather, by living with and touching forbidden animals, he has degraded himself, defiled his family, and betrayed his faith.

A System of Human Anatomy

Chlorophyll does not always occur in round globules, sometimes it is found in bands. Broadly speaking, Freudian and Lacanian readings assume a fixed view of human nature. I remarked besides that the colour of the objects was the paler the more highly they were magnified by means of the microscope.

He will soon open himself out, however, and we shall see that his free end is provided with a number of tentacles; these he waves about in the water to draw small swimming creatures to his mouth which is situated in the centre of the group of tentacles. An infinite nature and a finite nature must needs differ infinitely, and therefore can by no means be the same nature. At this time and during the preceding century the Roman University had the greatest medical school in the world.
