New forms of modernism influenced by Négritude arose in these locations, including tendencies identified with creolisation in the Caribbean and the Natural Synthesis movement in Nigeria. The one woman, Ikponwose Omagie, seems to have faded away early on. Nigeria today has become a country noted for its art works, both ancient and modern.

Uche Okeke

Adenaike concludes that the critical assessment of the works of art themselves -- as opposed to discussion of the idea of informal workshop training and the commercialization of the art -- has yet to occur.
