Ontological, Epistemological, and Methodological Positions

Although it is important, we cannot here explore this distinction in the depth it deserves. A useful analogy lies in the doubt-resisting character of the cogito.

limits of ontological critique: from judgmental rationality to justification

In our modern terms, it is as if they were all two different people or beings at the same time, each with its own distinct form of personality or subjectivity. And without rich households, as we have seen, Athens would have lacked many of the material and cultural resources necessary to sustain demokratia. Knowing God is not simply affirming true propositions about him — it is having his very essence in our minds.

For a more general philosophical treatment of dreaming arguments, see Dunlap 1977 and Williams 1978. These serve, in effect, to empty agency of any content such that the actor becomes a mere relay for delivering a series of imperatives inherent in the context itself.

Kant's Philosophy of Religion (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

In earlier days, philosophers used the term " to refer to Plato's belief that his 'forms' are 'real'; nowadays, the term 'realism' often has an almost opposite meaning, so that Plato's belief is sometimes called ". ### Ontology

Heidegger proposes that our way of being human and the way the world is for us are cast historically through a fundamental ontological questioning. Jochen, the computational model continues to enjoy rapid success. A related objection has the method calling not merely for doubt, but for disbelief or dissent.

Descartes' Epistemology (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

But my nature is also such that I cannot fix my mental vision continually on the same thing, so as to keep perceiving it clearly; and often the memory of a previously made judgement may come back, when I am no longer attending to the arguments which led me to make it. They were dualisms between positivism and hermeneutics; between collectivism and individualism; structure and agency; reason and cause; mind and body; fact and value.
