Rabindranath Tagore

In one of his letters the poet wrote: My memory of my childhood is hazy, though I distinctly recall how some mornings I suddenly felt an intense joy of life Jibanananda apparently for no reasons whatsoever. His anubhuti is arguably wonderfully uncanny.

Yet the presence of a natural fording place gave Rome some unusual advantages. On his way he asks his innermost companion: Ar kata dure niye yabe more He sundari? The eternal universal life finds expression in the entire cosmic life. We used to think that Rabindranath finally eschewed his aesthetic sensibilities of Gitanjali-Gitimalya and surrendered himself to the feet of Bishvadebata.

Rabindranath Tagore

An intense urge from within him expressed itself through his work. This awareness has found unique expression at different stages of his life; its flow has taken twists and turns at times—waning in winter and waxing in the rainy season. Bhebechhi ajike khelite haibe Nutan khela, Ratribela.

Ohe antaratama, Mitechhe ki taba sakal tiyas Asi antare mama. Hence the poet beholds the majestic beauty of his lover everywhere in the universe: Ekhan bhasichha tumi Ananter majhe; swarga hate martabhumi Karichha bihar; sandhyar kanakbarne Rangichha anchal! He remains the infinite in the midst of all limits.
