Such might be the framework of your Drama, just what cannot help striking one at first glance, and would not such a Drama go well before your translation? I have all to say yet—next letter.

The Relationship of Elizabeth Barrett Browning and Robert Browning

I cannot conceive of a sincere artist who is also a careless one—though one may have a quicker hand than another, in general,—and though all are liable to vicissitudes in the degree of facility—and to entanglements in the machinery, notwithstanding every degree of facility.

Your friendship and sympathy will be dear and precious to me all my life, if you indeed leave them with me so long or so little.

The letters of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett, 1845

I am inclined to think that we want new forms, as well as thoughts.

Robert Browning (Browning, Robert, 1812

Rogers' bag-wig and the rest, and David Wilkie's sword—and also that the Laureate, so equipped, fell down upon both knees in the superfluity of etiquette, and had to be picked up by two lords-in-waiting. Why, if I live on and yet do not escape from this seclusion, do you not perceive that I labour under signal disadvantages—that I am, in a manner, as a blind poet? Hedley's herein enclosed, a full and complete certificate,.

Elizabeth Browning

If my heart were open to you, you could see nothing offensive to you in any thought there or trace of thought that has been there—but it is hard for you to understand, with all your psychology and to be reminded of it I have just been looking at the preface of some poems by some Mr. But—you know—if you had entered the 'crypt,' you might have caught cold, or been tired to death, and wished yourself 'a thousand miles off,' which would have been worse than travelling them.
