These efforts have also been criticised as fruitless because of the self-interest and corruption of Chiang Kai-Shek's regime. Rohingyas are not the only refugees to have left Burma since its military government, the State Law and Order Restoration Council SLORC , came to power after a series of popular uprisings in 1988. To this end, the Administration proposes a dedicated allocation for refugees who suffered or fear persecution on account of religion and refugees who are within the categories established through the Lautenberg and Specter amendments.
