Ambiguity and Discomfort in The Narrative of Arthur Gordon Pym of Nantucket

This part of the story is well paced and rates with some of my favorite Poe stories. Except that friend dies within a few weeks! Docking ashore, they encounter hostile black-skinned natives before escaping back to the ocean.

The Narrative of Arthur Gordon Pym of Nantucket

One evening they are almost killed during a storm but are thankfully rescued by a whaling ship. We don't get the creepiness vibe like we do in his short stories. As they prepare to turn back to rejoin their crew, a massive disruption of the earth occurs and their entire party is buried in a million tons of earth and stone.

Narrative Arthur Gordon Pym Nantucket by Poe Edgar Allan

The canoe heads toward the looming cataract and Pym and Peters see a large white figure rise up before them. Facing the cruelty and savagery of his fellow sailors, the unforgiving sea, and a hostile and utterly alien indigenous society, he survives albeit barely.

The Narrative of Arthur Gordon Pym

Narrative Arthur Gordon Pym Nantucket by Poe Edgar Allan

The island Pym ends up on Tsalal only has black birds, purple water, there is no whiteness anywhere, and the islanders are horrified by whiteness. He might have been tempted to offer his vision of what might lie around the South Pole but in the end he was probably lacking any true idea or opinion about what that might be and he decided to leave it as a mystery. In the confusion sure to break out among the superstitious sailors, Peters and Augustus, helped by Tiger, will take over the ship again.

Ends abruptly so we don't know what happens!! I have never encountered a writer who writes flawlessly, easy to understand yet it feels old.

In the pursuit of greater sailing adventures, Pym and Augustus decide to become stowaways.
