More than fifty American colleges and universities have been represented, and more than fifty members of the service have received the Croix de Guerre or the M daille Militaire. This work is in the public domain in the United States of America, and possibly other nations.

AFS Intercultural Programs

In April, 1915, through the efforts of A. In 2018, NSLI-Y offers academic scholarships to learn Arabic, Mandarin Chinese, Hindi, Indonesian, Korean, Persian Tajiki, Russian, and Turkish through summer and year-long programs in China, Morocco, Oman, Jordan, India, Korea, Russia, Tajikistan, Turkey, Taiwan, Indonesia, and other countries around the world. So April, 1916, finds the three old Sections still on duty at the front, the fourth already making its reputation there, and a fifth being fitted out.

Here AFS offers an outbound long-term student exchange program since 1997 and an inbound program since 2001. In the fall of 1914, when the war front moved away from Paris, the American Ambulance set up an outpost in Juilly and sent out detached units of volunteer drivers to serve informally with the British and Belgian armies in the north.

AFS volunteers are both young and old, busy professionals and retirees, and students and teachers. Robert Imbrie published Behind the Wheel of a War Ambulance in 1918, as did Julien Bryan with Ambulance 464: Encore des Blessés. The AFS recruits who joined the Service in late spring 1917, after Congress's declaration of war, were greeted by Piatt Andrew with a request: Would they forego ambulance driving for trucking supplies to the front? This scarce antiquarian book is a facsimile reprint of the original. In December 1914, the arrival of Harvard graduate Abram Piatt Andrew expanded the scale of operations beyond France.
