Historical Office, U.S. Army Materiel Command - AMC commander urges contracting leaders to 'keep rowing hard' including on-site examinations, OSD policy research and analysis, administrative, various operative expertise training, according to the annual training plan.

Assessment	ACT: The head of the CBRIC is appointed for a minimum five-year term.
Comments	Materially More Complex The accessibility and budgetary programs, and the relative control on CBRIC's resources could compromise the independence of the CBRIC. Other more detailed matters such as the CBRIC's having to be considered to be in a more confidential bank and/or other than being able to do so itself, are also a concern from an independence perspective (see CP 21). Recently, CBRIC has demonstrated very high levels of independence in fact, as its response to challenges in the Chinese banking system. CBRIC leadership report wide support from government leaders has been supportive of the overall CBRIC and government approach to regulatory reform and conditions. They see that approach as handling them compared to experience in some other countries. CBRIC has clearly been very effective in building a high performance organization and demonstrating the desired transformation throughout the organization. This is serving the CBRIC well in meeting its mission. However, achieving that that mission will likely be an increasing challenge. Complexity is rising, as may be the scale in a range of matters. There will be a need for more resources of the quality of better risk control systems which may require increasingly complex judgments and may require staff to develop different skills. Hardly independent will require additional expertise. Material assessment will suggest that consistency of risk assessment and management may need to be enhanced (see CP 20). The answers believe that specific expertise of CBRIC needs to be enhanced. The constraints on the CBRIC budget and detailed hardware control are major issues that need to be resolved. CBRIC needs a strategic plan, supported by State Council to build expertise. This will require flexibility by the State Council regarding the CBRIC budget and more flexibility in any necessary arrangements in order to attract and retain people with expertise. The potential for the State Council to control certain CBRIC's roles or decisions adds to independence concerns. In addition the requirement to disclose reasons for dismissal of CBRIC leadership is not contained in legislation but in an internal rule on tenure of senior government officials promulgated by the State Council. CBRIC might also adopt internally a more forward-looking approach to resource planning that goes beyond a one-year horizon. This might help identify major spending challenges and plan better for them. There is opportunity to enhance public information on CBRIC's monitoring and budgeting, medium-term priorities and performance reporting, which is well compared to other leading international regulators, in light of the importance, and the increasing complexity of banks. CBRIC should develop a plan for further building expertise. Legal framework. A suitable legal framework for financial reform is also necessary, including provisions relating to authorization of banking establishments and their ongoing supervision. CP 21: The CBRIC's experience for banking sector and derives its authority for this purpose from the Law of the People's Republic of China on Banking Regulation and Supervision (Banking Supervision Law) which was promulgated in 2003 and came into effect on January 2004. The Law of the People's Republic of China on Commercial Banks (Commercial Bank Law), which was adopted in 1995 and amended in 2003, is also relevant. The CBRIC's role and authority is also defined in its objectives for strengthening of supervision and management and thus ensuring the sound and stable operation of commercial banks. CBRIC is the licensing authority for all commercial banks, policy banks and urban and rural credit co-operations. In addition, CBRIC also licenses three non-bank institutions that are supervised and regulated by the State Council and the State Administration of Financial Assets (SAFE).

The Troubles of National Treasury

These two gentlemen led the way by enabling their commanders, supporting the staff and helping the workforce accomplish the mission. According to AMC officials, today's challenging times underscore the importance of properly caring for our military servicemembers and the families who support them. Now I look back at that time and feel comfort knowing that I made a decision that was right for me- the following summer I got an internship at the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, relieving the anxiety I once felt about my progression in my intended career.
