Chapter 3

In addition to a number of regulatory amendments, nearly all of the high-priority recommendations of the 2010 Expert Advisory Panel on Occupational Health and Safety have been implemented, including mandatory awareness training that focuses on the health and safety rights and responsibilities of workers, supervisors and employers, and through the implementation of training requirements for working at heights.

Workforce Development & Skills Shortage Trends in Ontario

Competitive Economic Pressures Globalization The globalization of product and labour markets has had a major impact on employment in Ontario.

Workforce Development & Skills Shortage Trends in Ontario

Income Security Reform and Innovation Structural changes in the labour market are reducing the ability of some workers to earn adequate incomes from employment and are leading to a greater share of workers in unstable employment with less secure incomes. Other advances include the internet, increased automation and digitization, machine-to-machine communication and developments in artificial intelligence. The Decline of Unions in the Private Sector Union coverage rates have declined in Ontario from 29.

Trends and events in Ontario's labour market

While change is happening, as the publications note, no one knows the magnitude or the pace of the changes that are coming. Moreover, unlike larger companies, these smaller businesses generally do not have a sophisticated human resource department that will ensure compliance with the law. As of 2017, Ontario is the second fastest-growing provincial economy in Canada, the first being Alberta.
