He soon dis- covered that the ground was ill-chosen, for the great towers of Tancred and David or the Castle of the Pisans, as it was then called commanded his bat- teries, and the frequent sallies of the Christians drove back his engineers and opposed the erection of his mangonels. If this is not a mere invention it must refer to Catherine, Perkin Warbeck's wife, for it seems no mediaeval queen visited Buryan, unless it were as might well have been in this case. There are several reasons for this approach.
