Sanctions are not imposed on North Korea primarily because they would block grain donations, resulting in the deaths of millions more, a possibility that does not appear to concern the Dear Leader. In fact, when compared with five other high-income Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development OECD countries the group looked at — Australia, Mexico, New Zealand, South Korea, and the United Kingdom — the US performs worse than average on empowerment rights, such as the right to participate in government, and on the right to be safe from the state.

5 human rights issues that defined 2019

While there may be general agreement about ending human rights violations, there will be no general agreement about the root causes. At least 75,000 drug dependent persons were detained in 71 overpopulated rehab camps in 2002.

In most countries people formally have as many as 400 international human rights — rights to work and leisure, to freedom of expression and religious worship, to nondiscrimination, to privacy, to pretty much anything you might think is worth protecting. It can only fulfil its obligations if it puts human rights at the centre of its response. The harmful norms that perpetuate sexual violence take a heavy toll on families and communities too.

Human Rights Violations in North Korea

These organizations must go beyond the chamber of horrors and into the arena of ideas. Several authoritarian states — including the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia and Saudi Arabia — refused to vote in favour of the universal declaration and instead abstained. Experts assigned the US a score of 5.
