A How

This is a particular issue for schools serving disadvantaged communities.

School and community

To create the World of Work, the district collaborated with members of local government and business, inviting them to share their visions for the community and discuss the trajectory of their fields. Such activities need not be provided within the school and by teachers alone.

A How

With some partnerships, students can even take the lead to gain valuable leadership experience. The schools also benefit the communities by employing teachers who would otherwise be without jobs and income.

We have a two-dimensional solution being implemented in response to a three-dimensional problem Interestingly, Tahir Alam, chair of the Park View Educational Trust, one of the schools at the centre of the affair, has also spoken of poor school-community relations being central to Trojan Horse. Speaking to student wellbeing or support staff like counsellors or asking for a referral to an educational psychologist might help if you need extra support or expertise. Stronger School Reputation Schools that engage families and community members see a statistically significant increase in their reputation; when they focus their efforts on making parents feel comfortable in the school setting.
