He has since severed ties with the club. The first four of these have been affected by subjects under conditions in which the pressure applied to metals was measured or when there was no direct contact.

Geller Effect

ANALYZING THE GELLER EFFECT by John G. That is inextricably tied to the results of the experiments mentioned above, but it was felt appropriate to attempt as descriptive a discussion as possible before soaring to the rarefied atmosphere of theoretical analysis. He does everything with great care, meticulous misdirection and flawless instinct.

The metals include copper, aluminum brass, several forms of steel, tin, lead, zinc, and silver. Geller is probably the most thoroughly exposed charlatan of all time, but he is still hailed by many believers as a genuine psychic. At least fifty such cases have been reported to the experimenter by reliable witnesses, though he has personally investigated only twenty-five of these cases, and of these only six were observed in action, making it possible to say they were genuine.
