Moral Education Revisited: Truth and Justice as Educational Goals on JSTOR

If pines came from nos of Filipinos we may not be pining as we do. It is perhaps no more than a vague amalgam of residual ethical beliefs and a bias towards particular practices not amenable to rational analysis but nevertheless prompting certain attitudes towards the family, education, social responsibility and views of government. Human rights were usually accorded low priority by Asian states, which devoted their energy to efforts in developing their economies, and creating national identities.

“Filipino time” revisited —

Prehistoric Philippines was not a Garden of Eden from which our forefathers were expelled because they ate of the tree of colonialism. There is an echo of how the Nazis taunted and harassed those who were seen as too cosmopolitan and allegedly foreign-controlled, especially Germans of Jewish descent.

Yet at the same time tens of thousands of disadvantaged people, especially from the countryside, conduct demonstrations in the centre of Bangkok against the uneven distribution of income from the booming economy. I agree with Dave that the gut issue is when to use English as a medium of instruction. It has to be understood that, culturally and historically, Manila is unique in its own way.

Filipino values

English nation, Spanish nación or French nation are all derived from Latin or birth.

Second, as a military historian, EABO sounded awfully familiar. These can change in only two ways: by invention or by borrowing. Those are at least the main thoughts that I extracted while reading, all very relevant.

CONSTANTINO, Renato R.

The job market, the world of entrepreneurship and business, are using English and in that world mastery of this language, plus skills in the math and science are what really matters. Ever since the conquest and colonization of the valley of Mexico by Hernán Cortés, Mexicans have had to cope with wave after wave of profound social and spiritual disruption — wars, rebellions, revolution, corruption, dictatorship and now the threat of becoming a narco-state. Many middle class and people were together in the Katipunan in 1892-1896 and again back in 1986.
