Resource Library

ERGs are led by employees in an effort to foster a supportive environment and to enhance company policies around diversity and inclusion. As well as helping to build communities among people with shared identities and experiences. This resource is an overview of the concepts and management decisions needed to calculate the true costs of activities for a nonprofit and also a how-to guide for the accompanying spreadsheet template. Job shadowing is similar in that the employee watches another employee do the job in order to develop the proper skills.

Detecting Hidden Bias

In turn, these decisions can affect employee turnover and quality of life. A two-year study by Great Place to Work® of more than 800,000 employees at Fortune 500 companies found that most people reported stable or even increased productivity levels after employees started working from home. Our own survey of shows a similar increase, from 16% to 65% of staff working virtually.
