The High Impact of Digital Technologies on Employee Training

Overall, growing international competition and interdependency, intensifies the pressure on executives, supervisors and all employees to become more innovative, more quality and cost conscious.

Challenges of HRM: 9 Emerging Challenges

Young people who are hungry, interested and engaged are infinitely more employable, and when they have a passion for achievement, there are no limits to what they can do. Technology enabled training is not a solution for an ineffective employee training and development program.

10 Corporate Training & Development Trends to Watch Out for in 2020

Companies need to prioritise learning and, more importantly, upgrade how it happens. This works well considering employees are now willing to take the time to improve their knowledge and share their expertise in order to stay ahead of learning trends and other employees. Using your smartphone or other device, geofencing delivers bits of job-related training and development just when you need it.

Training Post

Microlearning continues to play a huge part in the future of corporate training, providing employees with easily-digested bites of information or instruction that can be immediately applied to a task or project.

What Should We Expect For The Future of Corporate Training In 2020?

The future employers, who are probably looking for a long term employee, might not be impressed with the job hopping tendencies. Only 49 percent of organizations have a senior leader running the training function and fewer than 45 percent have a written business plan for learning, let alone one that has been aligned with the organization's broader objectives. The Bureau of Public Enterprise issues guidelines to regulate negotiations in public enterprises which do not remain unknown to even trade unions.
