The notable aspect of this renewable energy solution is that the installation of high penetration solar with batteries has already been successfully demonstrated in two high Arctic communities - the communities of Colville Lake and Aklavik. The Legislative Assembly determines the specific responsibilities of each special committee and identifies a specific time frame for the completion of their mandate.

North

With the new carbon tax set to take effect on September 1, and both federal and territorial elections slated for not long after that, there is some uncertainty around the future of the carbon tax in the NWT. This corridor will also support Canadian innovation in the green technologies of the future, as this region is host to world-class metals and minerals including cobalt and bismuth, which are critical commodities required in the manufacture of clean energy products such as solar panels, wind turbines, batteries and electronic vehicles.

Northern priorities and carbon pricing

Originally, the territory was set to impose the new tax on July 1, 2019. The situation began to change in the 1880s: in 1886, four seats were allocated to the entire for official representation in
