I think it is also strongly influenced by The Lonely Crowd. On top of the cistern is an aerosol air freshener as someone I read said recently: flowers on vocals and strings, shit on bass and drum and beside the bowl there is a toilet brush.

Basil Bernstein, Class, Codes and Control. Volume 3. Towards a Theory of Educational Transmissions

This guy is a great categoriser. You can either divide up the time at school so that the units have very fixed boundaries — This is a mathematics class, we count here, but we don't do stories, you draw in art and you sing in music — or those boundaries can be much more permeable and blurred.

Class, Codes and Control: Towards a theory of educational transmissions

The role of ritual in education is only one example.

The boundaries between inside and outside are challenged here.
