Hillary and Norgay's Mount Everest Adventure

With Sir Edmund still on his air mattress, the men collapsed the tent, wrapped him in it and dragged him down the mountain to a lower altitude. The Everest In 1952, Hillary discovered that he and his friend George Lowe had been invited by the Joint Himalayan Committee for the approved British 1953 attempt and immediately accepted. Any mountaineering team that aimed to reach the top of Everest needed expert planning, the latest clothing and equipment, and terrific courage and endurance to tackle the Earth's highest peak.
