Don't get mixed up between 'ni totte' and 'ni taishite'

Satō was very much a disciple of Atsutane; his attitude to the Emperor and imperial expansion was in the kokugaku mainstream. For example, the Imperial Rescript on Education of 1890 deliberately included Confucianist and Shintō elements, encouraging reverence for a divine and paternalistic emperor, while textbooks on morals gradually replaced Western models such as Abraham Lincoln with Japanese models such as the industrious Ninomiya Sontoku aka Kinjirō.

The Japanese sources must themselves be subjected to rigorous scrutiny. In November 1886, the first board meeting was held in Berlin, and Riegel was appointed president.

Rethinking Japanese Modernism

Until we recognized this mistake, we could not continue writing history, and I would not write it.
