The average Hagerman Horse was about the same size as a modern zebra or Arabian horse, and likely possessed a stiff mane and fur arrangement similar to that of these modern equines. Today, all three are protected as part of this national monument. There are plenty of other museums in Texas, too, such as the in Dallas, where you can check out more giant fossils.

Maps

Why not sleep in the great outdoors like the pioneers did? Wall itself is something to see, with plenty to keep the tourist attraction attracted busy.

Things To Do

A dark sky park, and located far away from most big city lights, camping here is phenomenal, and abundant. The trails are generally short—totaling about 10 miles in all—and vary from easy riverside saunters to rigorous climbs to the canyon rim.
