Alphabetical List of Collections: C

Among its manuscript holdings are a ledger-daybook kept by in the from 1696 to 1759, and the account book of the English sculptor from 1809 to 1826. Some of these are housed in the Library's music, rare book, and area studies divisions, but most are in the custody of the Manuscript Division, one of the original departments established in 1897, when the Library moved across the street from its cramped quarters in the United States Capitol to its own magnificent new structure, later appropriately named the Thomas Jefferson Building. In spite of this heterogeneity, the library aims to collect deeply in specific areas, guided by both resources and historical precedence.
