W.D. Albright fonds

For executive action challenges raise a particular need to preserve the constitutional proportions of constitutional claims, lest the Constitution be demoted to what we have called a font of tort law. He loved to go trout fishing, watch NASCAR, wrestling and football. Albright's articles on agricultural topics and on Peace River area history, his radio broadcasts on victory loans, photographs of the Beaverlodge Station and correspondence.

County of Sacramento v. Lewis, 523 U.S. 833 (1998)

The common law may have made an attempted seizure unlawful in certain circumstances; but it made many things unlawful, very few of which were elevated to constitutional proscriptions. The county's petition assumed that the constitutional question was one of substantive due process, and the parties briefed the question on that assumption. See Shapiro, Public Officials Qualified Immunity in Section 1983 Actions Under Harlow v.
