In 2017, he obtained the Emerald Outstanding Paper Award for Excellence — best paper in international journal of quality and reliability management IJQRM. In the context of responsible tourism and local development, this study confirms that tourism can act as a vehicle for the empowerment of women whilst highlighting the remaining challenges for gender equality in tourism. While tourism has begun to focus on community consultations, the process has tended to follow the path of development for communities rather than development by communities.

The impact of women's empowerment on sustainable tourism development: Mediating role of tourism involvement

His research interest includes human resources management and sustainability with specific focus upon hospitality and tourism context. Empowering women to participate fully in economic life is essential to building strong economies; creating more stable and just societies; achieving internationally agreed goals for development, sustainability and human rights; and improving the quality of life of women, and consequently, that of communities.

Empowerment for sustainable tourism development / Trevor H.B. Sofield

ISLAMABAD: Leaders and political workers must break through political, ethnic and regional divisions and unite to raise their voices against exploitation of natural resources in mountainous areas of the country along with social and livelihood challenges faced by people. Recent developments of rural sustainable tourism on post-communist societies will most likely lead to an increase in a number of studies focused on interactions and patterns of relationships in rural areas.
