The just and victorious king administers justice in accordance with Dharma established law , Sanstha customary law , Nyaya edicts, announced law and Vyavahara evidence, conduct. But the same person who write artha shastra seems to be quite political and he talks about how a king has to do whatever is required to maintain the rule of law and remove decedents and remove opponents.

This view has been challenged by Thomas Trautmann, who asserts that a free market and individual rights, albeit a regulated system, are proposed by Arthashastra. When everything fails, resort to military force. .
