Post

Planning for the recovery of prisoners of the Japanese, most of whom had been held in harsh conditions, had begun in 1944 and the 2nd and 3rd Australian Prisoner of War Reception Groups were established at Singapore and Manila respectively in August 1945. In line with a plan approved by the Australian Government in September 1945, general demobilisation was conducted in four stages. The volume of sales dropped rapidly after 1947 and the Disposals Commission was disbanded in July 1949.

Demobilisation

Training courses were made available to veterans, and by 1951 94,000 had completed university, technical or rural training courses and 39,000 were still in training.

Demobilization

A further 135,000 began training but withdrew before completing their course. DemobilisationCritical incidents may trigger a wide range of physical and psychological symptoms, including increased heart rate, high blood pressure and anxiety.

Critical Incident Stress Management

Preparations for the disposal of equipment began in the second half of 1944 when the War Cabinet directed the military to survey all stocks and indicate any surpluses.

Workplace safety

The Navy managed to sell a few sub-chasers and other smaller craft in Europe, but most ships made their way back across the Atlantic, where they were either returned to original owners, passed on to the Coast Guard for enforcing Prohibition against alcohol smugglers, or in some cases promptly decommissioned. The Australian Centenary History of Defence. At the height of the war effort, the Navy had nearly 500 vessels in European waters; by October 1919, these had been culled down to 108.
