Race, Politics and Economic Development: Community Perspectives by James Jennings

The removal of capital controls from many advanced economies in the 1970s and 1980s, after the termination of the Bretton Woods fixed-exchange rate system, opened these economies even more to global markets. Trusteeship aims at some realizable outcomes like capital-labour cooperation, formation of social capital, reduction in concentration of economic power in a few hands, and voluntary cutting down the wants.

The relationship between economics and politics

If one part of the society suffers, all parts suffer. After Brown: The Rise and Retreat of School Desegregation. Even allowing for the sharp decreases in output as the result of the crisis, postwar economic growth is spectacular compared to what was achieved in the previous thousand years.
