Paul Ricoeur and Narrative Identity

Sin is in that sense an account of the psychological consequences of being cut off from our creator, read mother. Interpretations, of course, need to be checked against and challenged by other interpretations and they will sooner or later need to be redone as situations change over time.

Paul Ricoeur and the Hermeneutics of Suspicion: A Brief Overview and Critique

The first volume of this projected trilogy, Freedom and Nature: The Voluntary and the Involuntary 1950 , proposes a phenomenology of the will, while bracketing the reality of evil.

Paul Ricoeur

Reagan and David Stewart, Boston: Beacon Press, 1978. Yes, certainly, but the texts are alien or brutal.

Ricoeur, Paul

The past is always before the present which is always after the past and before the future.

Paul Ricoeur

This formula indicates that there is a priority of ethics understood as teleological over morality understood as normative practice. His first major publications after World War II, though, were written using existential phenomenology and the French tradition of reflexive philosophy, reflecting not just his study of Husserl, which had begun prior to World War II but also of Karl Jaspers, Gabriel Marcel, Jean-Paul Sartre, and Maurice Merleau-Ponty.

Paul Ricoeur (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

This means considering those uses of language that extend beyond a single word or sentence, as well as those which cannot be interpreted as simple logical propositions that say S is P.

Paul Ricoeur and Narrative Identity

Ideologies both claim to legitimate the positions of those in power or those seeking power and cover the gap between what they assert and the way things actually are.

Paul Ricoeur and Narrative Identity

He taught there regularly for a portion of each year until 1992. On one level, he explored the practice of methods of interpretation as an arc leading from an initial situation and understanding to broadened understanding, both of the interpreter and the world as a world we can imagine ourselves as inhabiting.
