All his novels, of course, are in part about the return of the past, the denial of the past. This ended really well, though. This is the story of the Fukuhara family, a family with ties to America and ties to Japan.

Midnight in Broad Daylight: A Japanese American Family Caught Between Two Worlds by Pamela Rotner Sakamoto

When you feel like you're right there in the book, you know the author has written it well. He realized how many Franco-Americans never grew up speaking French, making him feel like the last person of the younger generations to speak the language. In a twist of circumstance, Saberi is back on the job, taking in these diverse stories and recording them in memory.

There are a number of people, but it is not confusing. She is not just interviewing or reading journals, she brings the story and the people in it to life. This summer, Pacy's family is going to Taiwan for an entire month to visit family and prepare for their grandmother's 60th birthday celebration.

'Between Two Worlds,' by Roxana Saberi

American Tumbleweeds is a slice of life out of the 60's for a young girl and her family caught between two worlds. For those who stay behind is the loss of the support of beloved children and grandchildren; for those who leave is the hard reality that dreams of a better life are not easily achieved.
