painting portraits, preferring compositions in which he could avoid a focus on the detail necessary to achieve a likeness of the sitter.

Giorgio Vasari (Author of The Lives of the Artists)

Later art historians would expose a number of faults, including his fondness for gossip and embellishment, what we might now call 'alternative facts', in the pursuit of a good story. Karel Van Mander was probably the first Vasarian author with his Painting book Het Schilderboeck, 1604 , which encompassed not only the first Dutch translation of Vasari, but also the first Dutch translation of Ovid and was accompanied by a list of Italian painters who appeared on the scene after Vasari, and the first comprehensive list of biographies of painters from the Low Countries.
