Lirael: Daughter of the Clayr

Lirael is the daughter of a Clayr, but is a very late bloomer, having not inherited the gift of the Sight like all other Clayr teenagers. If I have to choose, I will say Lirael is definitely the more aggravating one.

Lirael (book)

Well, after I finished Sabriel in a manner of hours I knew there would be a sequel so I set out looking for one. Sam started out alright, but I came to loathe him more than Lirael herself by the end. After a few days, they came across a boy and a cat, floating past in a bath tub.

Not that people would like this book, but that everyone would like it. I really liked the whole Charter marks and Free Magic stuff. As is often done with teens that are slow to develop, she gets to choose a trade, and she picks library duties, a very dangerous occupation in a place where reading can sometimes be hazardous to your health.

Along with her new found companion, the Disreputable Dog, she ventures into the unknown; to find out who she is and what she is.

Lirael

The appearance of the Disreputable Dog - a creature of magic - was a welcome change to Lirael's story.
